

Romeo & Juliet

So did they meet, two living things
When their eyes lit up with beams
She placed her beauty in his soul
And in her love his strength did grow

When in that night their bodies met
A tiny sparkle changed to sunset
They lived too fast to see its flame
A couple of tears turned into rain

They took too much of magic wine
So their contact was divine,
Divine but short and very strong
A single note broke into a song,

Two children blinded with that love
Did let infection into their blood
What could go on in endless stream
Just burned away and grew unseen,

At their adventure people laughed
Some got indifferent, some got sad
But still their story's a masterpiece,
That pure feeling that still exists...

Written by Luba Yamskaya 2006 ©